HONGKONG, KATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1889

T is a sound commercial principle that a trader who wishes to buy either raw material, labour or the produce of labour, ought, chases in the cheapest market. Although self-interest leads individual traders to al. Telegraph Station Bolinao a smart shock of most invariably conform to this principle, most corporate pations have set above it the principle that native industries must be encouraged and that the cheap articles of foreigners must be burdened with dues to bring their price up to or beyond that of home-made articles. England, almost alone among the nations of the world, has refused to adopt this so-called protectionist policy, a policy the inevitable result of which is to make the inhabitants of the 'protected' state pay dearly for articles which they can manufacture only at great expense, while the articles they can wake are restricted in their abroad. While, however, we think that

Eugland does right, even surrounded by principles, we do not think that this geneprotectionist rivals, to adhere to free trade tent of injuring her own pitizens and her own industries. The desire to eucourage native industries is very laudable, and it is but right that the first care of every country should be for its own trade. Although it is a doubtful form of encouragement to exclude foreign goods, any Government who sent -orders abroad which could be executed as well, or even very nearly as well, at home would belray the trust imposed in it and would be noting against the true interests of the people. Most of the Governments of Europe are inclined to err in the other extreme. Gormany not only constructs her own ironclads but now forbids the steamship companies she subsidiass Government order is sent abroad which can Waters a large dry dock fit to contain the

to order steamers from a foreign country. France takes up the same position. No by any means be executed at home, and none of her men-o'-war or subsidised steamships would dock in a foreign port if a convenient French port were anywhere near. How different the practice of England, at least in this part of the world! The convenience of the officers of her ships is apparently of greater concern to her than the development of British industry. In Lost of Contributions to the H.K. Fire panny-wise-and-pound-foolish way she is nut above resorting to something very like sharp practice to save a few shillings and pence. In a moment of papie she discovers the necessity of having in Far Eastern largest ironclad she is likely to send to this quarter of the world. She enters into negotiations with the Dock Company in Hongkong for the carrying out of this project, and concludes with them a pretty hard bargain. When the work of this large dock has got half way, some of her officials discover that there exists: a sand bank, or some sort of danger -we really furget what the nature of it was -and in order to avoid the remote risk of one of her ships sustaining camage thereby she insists, without making any additional contribution to the expense, on the plans being altered, and leads the Company to enlarge the dock and spend about half a million dollars in blasting a solid rock, which it was previously intended to avoid. A tariff of charges for docking and other work is made out, and the Company undertakes that the dock shall be available for the ships of Her Majesty whenever they may wish to enter. After having put the Dock Company to such a large expense, saddled thom with what is generally regarded as a veritable white elephant, and led them to contract a debt which will for many years to come be a drag on the revenue, one would have thought that the English Government would have considered itself morally bound to give all its docking to those who had spent so much on its behalf. But no. Japan is such a delightful country, and the Japanese are such a kind, obsequious, obliging people that it would be cruel to take away patronage from them. So the Audacious, before she went home, was overhauled at Nagasaki, although the new dock at Hongkong was ready to receive her, having already received two Chinese men-ofwar; and since then office ships have been entrusted to the same tender care. British enterprise be habged! Moral obligations . Governments and officials are not bound by such considerations. If the Com-Dany remonstrates we'll ask them to reduce their tariff, and as they will not likely be willing to break the bargain we made with them, their refusal will be a capital excuse for sending our ships to the Japanese, who have been so kind as to reduce their rates a little below the tariff, to cut out the Britishers, and who are willing to let us do pretty much what we like, while our unbending countrymen insist on the fulfilment of our contracts. Such seem to be the sentiments of those who are responsible for the s control of our menof-war on this station. And they are apparently consistently carrying out this policy. for we read the other day that the Leander was expected at Nagasaki in a few days to dock. She might easily have come down to Hongkong, but the navel authorities do not think they are under any obligation to support British enterprise, even although they are morally inhebted to that enterprise to the extent of half a million dollars. The Dock Company must look to Chinese, Spanish and possibly American ment of war for a small return for the money expended in the construction of the large Admiralty Dock. Why the Company should tamely allow themselves to be treated in this fashion, we do not know. They have made some feeble profests locally, we believe, but that is of no avail. We doubt also whether it would do much good to appeal to the Admiral on the station, as he has a great deal of work to do. other things being equal, to make his pur having in addition to his ordinary duties; numerous diplomatic, social and family responsibilities. It is at Home that their just claims must be made good. The Admiralty authorities can be roused through Parliament or even by a vigorous protest in any of the leading London journals. Public feeling on such matters is now so strong that the Company have only to make their case well known in order to force redress. They have not unit a moral but almost a legal claim against the Admiralty. Had any two private firms been similarly conditioned, we might have heard long ere this of an action for damage on account of non-fulfilment of contract. We hope the Dock directors will some day awake to their duty in this respect, and that they will ;

take some vigorous action, instead of continuing the laiser faire policy which seems to have been hitherto pursued.

DIVINE SERVICE FOR SHAMEN .-- On Sunday morning, between 0 and 10.30 o'clock, the steam launch carrying the Bethel flag wil call alongside any vessel hoisting code pennant C., to convey men ashore to 11 a. m. service at St. Peter's Seamen's Church returning about 12.30.

THE congregation of Union Church will meet to-morrow in the City Hall Theatre for public worship, and at the evening service Miss Ackerman, of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of America, will preach, instead of Rev. C. H. Bondfield. The services will be at 11 a.m. and 7.80 p.m.

A MAN named Teeng A Fong was before Mr Robinson in the Police Court to-day or a charge of obtaining jewellery and money on false pretences. It appears that he had called on the wife of a silk-dealer in Macao the other day and told her that her husband, who had gone to Hongkong on busimess, had been arrested there, and that a matter of 840 was wanted for his release The anxious wife made up her mind to come to Hongkong and look after the mat ter herself, but on arriving here, accompanied by the prisoner, she was informed by him that her husband was in irons on board a certain vessel, and she, being amall-footed woman, did not feel herself equal to the exertion of going of board ship, and therefore gave the prisoner some lewellery and a $5-note, to obtain her husband's release. She afterwards discovered through a friend of her husband that the prisoner's atory was entirely false, and the police were informed of the matter at once. The prisoner admitted receiving the jewellery and money, but said it was because the complainant's husband had fleeced him of $50, by stating that he could make a $50 note turn into one for $'00 by placing it in a jar and leaving it there for a certain length of time, at the sud of which time the prisoner found that his bill had changed into a quantity of stones and rice. That, all the same, the result upon the public mind of the Colony is much the same-with the one hand the Governor reminds the residents that he is, or thinks he is, an autocrat; with the other he offers a something which bears the questionable shape of Home Rule so far as bungled drainage and deficient water supply are concerned.

That no mention was made of how the Peak Municipal Council was to pay its way, to purify its legacy of evil smalling drains, or to meet the requirements for a water supply.

That the question should at once be set at rest whether a suburb that gets a system of dramage, does or does not require that a supply of water be given to it.

That the precise sum of the contribution to rates necessary to establish a claim for the privileges of Police protection, light, and pure water-without mentioning impure drains-should now be laid down, so that residents in all growing suburber may see their way clearly before them.

THE BLOCK SYSTEM IN CUINA. Much as the Western nations may plume themselves on their inventious there are still some things in which this ancient Chinese State can give them points. Nowhere in the world has the block system. whether applied to railway organisation or to any other matter of public utility, boen brought to such absolute perfection ; and the sutomatic air-brakes in operation in China leave auch contrivances as the Westinghouse patent far behind. It is not yet two months since, in our espacity of chronicler of passing events, we were in a position to report that the railway movement was in full boom ; that the excontion of the earnest deire of the Throne to intersect the country with railways had been entrusted to prominent men, and that the work might be expected to proceed with all convenient despatch. At the same time we pointed out that the acquiescence of experienced officials in the entrusting of the undertaking to o cials of no experience was an ominous sign; while fact of the particular line of railway, ordered to be constructed being neither a commercial nor a strategical line boded only economical disaster to the enterprise. That was on the 7th of September; and almost immediately thereafter the symptoms of opposition began to shew themselves, and had gathered such consistency before the end of the month that the whole scheme put forward with so much literary pomp by Chang Chih-tung had been definitively out on the shelf. The steps of this process are interesting to all who like to mark the working of Chinese political muchinery. active promoters of railway extension in

It now appears pretty clearly that the China are limited to the Imperial family and the Viceroy Li. with one or two other individuals such as Lin Ming-chuan, while the official hierarchy in all its reticulations from the highest to the lowest is a body opposed to it; the greater part, passively, but a strong section among them actively opposed. For the time being this opposition is insurmountable. The Empress Downger and the Seventh Prince have succumbed to it, and the Viceroy Li, finding himself unsupported, has no choice but to abandon for the present the whole railway scheme. the part of it which he favoured as well as that of which, for so id reasons, he disapproved, - until the whirligig of time shall bring about the requisite change in the current of official opinion. This is indeed a melancholy collapse of the hopes so recently aroused of a new progressive era for China, but the fact unfortunately admits of why the nation represented by the body of its officials. has come to such a retrograde decision the task is not an easy one. It is safe, however, to make the general statemont that the opposition has not been exercited against railways on their proper merits. The rulers and leaders of opinion are for the most part fully convinced of the utility of railways for military, commercial and industrial purposes; and if the question could be isolated from all party and personal considerations there can hardly be a doubt that means wou'd be found to introduce the iron road. THE GENTREL MODERN BOXER BY AN AMATEUR OF THE THE PARCY.

It was a great scene at the Novelty Theatre the other night when you go there. To do so was a tedious business, as Great Queen Street was massed with crowd of gentlemen whom any one know ing nothing about it might have put down as the pick of the blackguards in London, but who were in restity the very cream of The Fancy. The particular thing they fancied at the moment was getling into the Theatre without payment, and, to judge from the interior, many of them must have succeeded. You might have paid your guinea for a scat, but you lucky enough if you found standingroom. A hundred or two invoured people -isvoured on payment guineas had seats on the stage; and they probably represented the distinguished patronage under which the entertainment was given, for quite as many as aix of the number wore evening dress. Outsiders might have wondered why such a crowd as never before filled the theatre was gathered together; but the great and select boxing world know well that 'om Bmith was to box Jack Wannop for 4501. It may be as well to inform the general public that matches of this killed mean serious business. Some of the andlence seemed displeated with the result, and loudly shouted that they came to see hitting and test coddling, which plainty showed that they were out of their element. People who pay for their seats at prices from five guiness downwards are not the sort to be put off with any of the oldfashioned, straigh -from the shoulder style of fighting. Buxing is a glorious pursuit. and it is associating that a free country's laws should make fighting without gloves illegal. Nabidy could possibly be hurt .znow any of the mon again except the action to relieve him entirely from the Mt. James's Guzette.
